

TRAIN NEARLY FELL IN RIVER

Collision Drove Car from Track on Bridge and It Was Saved from Topping Into Harlem by Firm Coupling.

WOMEN WERE TRAMPLED UNDER FOOT IN RUSH.

Frightful Calamity on Second Avenue Structure Narrowly Averted at Hour When Cars Were Crowded.

A light locomotive of the New York, New Haven and Hartford road crashed into the rear car of a crowded south-bound "L" train on the Second Avenue bridge at One Hundred and Twenty-ninth street and Harlem River to-day and threw it from the track.

When the crash came two dozen men crowded on the forward platform of the rear car were tossed into the air and strewn about the network of tracks and the footpath of the bridge. The man in the switch tower on the bridge, who had seen the accident, turned off the electric power from the third rail and prevented serious results.

Inside the car the passengers were jammed together in a human stevedore. The car settled down at an angle of 45 degrees, and that tossed all the passengers from the east to the west side of the car.

Arms, legs, heads, knees, hats, bundles and wraps were bunched together in an indescribable mass, and out of it rose the terrified shrieks of panic-stricken women and maddened men, all of whom thought that they were about to be plunged headlong to death in the river.

Scramble for the Doors. The moment the cars stopped a terrible scramble for the doors ensued. Men pushed and wrestled in the struggle to escape, grinding one another to the bone. Women in the car and when the police and firemen arrived had to be lifted from the car. It was thought that many of them had been seriously injured, but the ambulance men quickly revived them.

Long after the police thought all had been removed from the car, they were at work the police were surprised to see a slip of a girl crawling out of the door of the car. She was a pale, thin, and her clothing was soiled with the tramp of many feet. The police wondered where she could have been, and she said she had been awakened by the crash of the car.

Reading When Crash Came. Miss Stricker said she was reading when the crash came. The car was so badly shaken that she believed it had fallen into the river. She was the only one who was not injured. She was sitting in the car and when the crash came she was thrown into the air and landed on her feet. She was not injured.

Ambulance Calls Sent In. Capt. Geaghan, of the Alexander avenue station, and Policemen McCarthy and Wymer, of the Alexander avenue station, were called to the scene. They found the car on the bridge and the passengers were being rescued. The car was badly damaged and the passengers were injured.

MARIE LAYTON FAINTS IN COURT

When Sentenced Self-Confessed Defaulter of $37,000 Stolen from U. S. Playing Card Co. Becomes Unconscious.

CARRIED TO THE TOMBS BY COURT ATTENDANTS.

Prisoner Expected Clemency After Her Confession, Which Could Not Be Corroborated—Imprisonment Indeterminate.

Marie Layton, the confessed defaulter of $37,000 from the local office of the United States Playing Card Company, dropped from her chair to-day as if shot when sentenced to an indeterminate term of not more than five years nor less than one year by Judge Foster, in the Court of General Sessions. She was carried from the court-room to the Tombs by court officers, and it was nearly half an hour before she recovered consciousness under the care of the prison physician.

When the young woman entered the court-room she expected clemency. She had made a confession of guilt, implicating officers of the company, had turned over what cash she had left and her jewelry in the way of restitution and had promised to make further financial amends.

Lawyers Kirschberg and Limberger, of her counsel had made long pleas for her. But District Attorney Sandford told the Court that her confession, in which she alleged that certain officers of the company were responsible for her embarrassment and shared the profits, could not be confirmed.

Belonged to "Cinch Club." Mr. Sandford said that so far as his office knew the bulk of the money she stole was spent on Dr. Johnson, the Fifth Avenue dentist, with whom the girl lived.

"Some of the directors of the United States Playing Card Company," said Mr. Limberger, "formed a club which they called the 'Cinch Club.' The object of this club, of which this girl was appointed secretary, was to pay to certain directors larger dividends than those received by other directors, who lost by the transaction."

"This defendant has been well educated in business life, and her sole ambition has been the education of a younger sister. She began her business career when thirteen years old, and when twenty entered the employ of the United States Playing Card Company. There, under the tutelage of an officer of the company, she was taught the manipulation of accounts and the manipulation of relations with a person connected with the company and then it was that she put her knowledge into use. This man was in financial trouble most of the time, and took loans from the defendant and accepted presents from her, while she knew she was not receiving a salary of over $25 a week. I submit that this girl could not have committed the larceny without the connivance of this person. Is it any wonder that she fell under the circumstances?"

Gave Her Note for $10,000. "When the larceny was discovered last April she freely confessed her part in them and gave her note for $10,000, which she intended to pay. It is also true that she had arranged connection with a patent medicine firm, and would have been able to pay back what money she had obtained."

Assistant District Attorney Sandford, who has charge of the Layton case for the District Attorney's Office, said that the defendant had made a confession several days ago that she had been in consultation with him, and that she had been able to pay back what money she had obtained.

(Special to The Evening World.) RACE TRACK, AQUEDUCT, N. Y., Nov. 2.—Charming racing weather again prevailed at Aqueduct this afternoon. Outside of the opening day, which was very wintry, the association has been very fortunate in the matter of weather. The card to-day was very attractive and promising, racing of an excellent character. The stake was the Woodmere, at seven furlongs, which had a splendid field of entries.

The attendance was very large for a Monday, and betting was heavy. The track was fast. Two men were caught to-day presenting "colored" badges to collect bets from bookmakers. Pinkerton has them in charge.

TEACHER DROPS DEAD.

Frank Burns Expires While Talking to Students.

WOMAN LOOK-OUT IN A POOL-ROOM

She Admitted Police Capt. Hussey and Detectives to House in West Thirty-eighth street; Raid Followed.

MANY PRISONERS TAKEN AND SHE ALONE ESCAPED.

Man Who Alleged He Had Lost Money There Made the Complaint Against Recently Opened Establishment.

Acting as lookout for an alleged pool-room at No. 238 West Thirty-eighth street this afternoon, a pretty young woman made the mistake of admitting Police Captain James Hussey, of the West Thirty-seventh street station, and three of his plain-clothes men. A raid followed, which was only ended after pistols were drawn and the reserves from the station-house called to assist in making the arrests.

The raid was brought about by a man who claimed to have lost a large sum of money in the house. He called on Capt. Hussey this afternoon. "I have been robbed in a pool-room in your precinct," he told the Captain. "The pool-room is at No. 238 West Thirty-eighth street. I will show you the signal that will admit you. Walk past the house three times. Then glance at the window and stop, turning and facing the opposite side of the street. The house is used as a furnished-room house in the upper floors. Big gambling is going on there now."

Acting on the man's information, Capt. Hussey and his three detectives went to Thirty-eighth street. Three times they passed up and down in front of the house. Then Capt. Hussey looked at the window. He saw the face of a pretty woman. At once he faced the opposite side of the street, and then, turning, he ran up the steps, followed by his detectives. The door was opened for them by the pretty woman. She smiled a cordial welcome as she admitted the four men, who went to a large room on the first floor. The room was crowded.

Captain Was Recognized. While the policemen were looking over the crowd and listening to the races as called over the telephone some one recognized Capt. Hussey. "It's a raid," he screamed. Instantly every thing was confusion. Men scrambled to get to the street. They thought the policemen with all their strength. The woman took flight at the first cry, and was the only person who escaped.

The poolroom was handsomely fitted and was the place, so it is said, where Broadway plungers who could not get to the track placed their money. It is said to have been running about two weeks. Who the young woman is who acted as lookout and escaped is a mystery. She is said to have been handsomely dressed and had the appearance of being refined.

SHOT HIS TWO BROTHERS DEAD

Then Benjamin Weissinger Barred Himself in a Barn and Threatened to Shoot Any One Who Tried to Enter.

ROTSVILLE, Pa., Nov. 2.—After shooting and killing his two brothers, Benjamin Weissinger is besieged in the barn on the estate of his father, L. W. Weissinger, by a mob of angry neighbors, which he is holding at bay by threats of shooting.

Benjamin quarreled with his brothers, Frederick and Louis, and shot and killed both of them near the house. News of the tragedy spread rapidly throughout the neighborhood, and in a very short time a large crowd assembled. The murderer ran to the barn and bolted the doors.

FUSIONISTS AND TAMMANY BOTH SURE OF VICTORY

"We Are Preparing to Celebrate," Says Charles F. Murphy, Who Sticks to His Estimate that His Candidate Will Be Elected by Plurality of 86,000 Votes.

R. FULTON CUTTING SEES NO REASON TO WORRY FOR FUSION.

John C. Clarke in Charge of the Mayor's Campaign Believes that He Will Be Re-Elected by About 40,000 Plurality—Figuring on Brooklyn Is a Vexed Problem.

Tammany Hall was crowded to-day with district leaders and precinct workers arranging for the final distribution of election paraphernalia. Outward appearances indicated a general feeling of hopefulness. None of the leaders would admit that the figures they gave to Charles F. Murphy last week were padded. Mr. Murphy was on hand early. He held long conferences with his most trusted lieutenants and announced that he had no reason to believe that the forecast he has made of a probable plurality for McClellan of about 100,000 was excessive. "My reports show," he said, "that Mr. McClellan will carry all five boroughs. I stand by my prediction that his plurality in Manhattan and the Bronx will be 86,000 or more. Everything is finished but the voting and the shouting. I have advised that the Democrats of the various districts go ahead to-day and to-morrow to make arrangements for celebrating a victory, because victory is assured. We will be throwing our hats in the air before Wednesday."

He was asked to say something about the attacks made upon him by William S. Devery and Hugh McLaughlin. "I refuse to notice Devery," he said. "He is beneath my notice. As for McLaughlin, I have too much respect for his services to the party to venture upon a criticism of his actions or comments."

The attention of Mr. Murphy was called to the statement that thousands of floaters are being imported from Philadelphia and other cities to repeat at the polls for the Tammany ticket. He appeared to be amused. "If such a condition of affairs exists," he said, "it is up to the State Superintendent of Elections for this district to stop the illegal voting. The Republican party has complete and absolute control of the election machinery. If thousands of votes can be colonized it is either a confession of incompetency or of collusion. I cannot see how the Democracy of New York City is interested."

At Brooklyn headquarters everything was quiet. Senator McCarren reiterated his estimate of a plurality for McClellan in Kings. Jacob Brenner, for the Republican organization, and F. Harvey Field, for the Citizens' Union, agreed that Low will carry Brooklyn by 40,000 or more. John C. Clarke, Mayor Low's campaign manager and personal counsel, gave out a revision of his figures to-day. He still has the same general plurality for Mayor Low, however, 40,000. He said that later reports received by him made him sure that Queens will go for Low, and that there is not a shadow of a doubt that Richmond will also give a plurality for Low, and the Bronx, he thought, would also go for Low, but he was not so sure about Louis F. Haffen being beaten there for Borough President.

CUTTING'S HOPE IN BROOKLYN.

R. Fulton Cutting, speaking for the Citizens' Union, said that he had no reason to doubt the election of Mayor Low. He places great reliance on the situation in Brooklyn. His chief fear is for Mr. Sulzburger, but reports from the east side indicate that there has been a great improvement in the sentiment in the past week. The Citizens' Union winds up the campaign with a deficit. Mr. Cutting anticipates that this will be made up after the election. In speaking of the alleged attempts at colonization, he said: "We are fully able to cope with the situation. We have an organization of watchers, I can truthfully say, that is better in every respect than has ever been before. We will have two men in every election district in the Greater City to-morrow. Many of them are college men, and many football players are coming to work for us. Nearly all, with a very few exceptions, are volunteers."

Seth Sprague Terry, the chairman of the Citizens' Union Committee on Watchers, later said that the men were already coming in from various colleges and would all be on hand early to-morrow morning. He said that the organization of the watchers was better perfected and better manned than has ever been before in the history of the Citizens' Union.

POLICY SLIPS IN POCKET.

Expressman Arrested and Held for Trial in $500. Charged with having in his possession a number of policy slips, Thomas Deane, an expressman, of No. 22 Forth Street, was arraigned in the Tombs Court to-day before Magistrate Cornell. He was held for trial in $500. Lawyer Thomas Oliver and District Attorney Sandford are prosecuting the case for damages. Driver was arrested near the scene of the crime. The Magistrate told him to stand in the dock for damages. Driver was arrested near the scene of the crime. The Magistrate told him to stand in the dock for damages.
